Please describe your personality

I am a very bubbly and energetic person. I am extroverted and funny, always with a smile on my face. People like to be around me because my energy is contagious. I am very straightforward, and I stick to my values, kindness is one of the most important values I have been raised with.

I'm not the kind of person who will do something just because the people around them do so. I am very tenacious and a little bit stubborn, so I will go all in into my goals. I am very hardworking and responsible when it comes to work.

I will always protect my people and I am always there for them but I also know when I need time for myself. I love to read, self-improvement books are my favorite. I am an early riser, I think that getting up earlier gets you way ahead in the game (surprising how many things you can get done while the rest of the world is still asleep).

I love to be active and to learn new things. I am a certified personal trainer and I love boxing. I have been vegan for the past 3 years and one of my favorite things about it is seeing how much of an impact my choices and actions have on the planet, the life of others and on my personal well being and individual health.

Why do you want to become a donor? I want to help the families who are not able to conceive.

I remember being little watching a famous TV show in my country where the intended mum described her experience after surrogation. I was so young that I did not know this was a possibility but I still remember how grateful and thankful she was for being able to have a family. I would love to help other people make their dreams come true.
